Fortnite for android requirements

After Epic Games revealed that Fortnite Android would skip Google Play, it seems that Android specifications for Fortnite were made public. According to the evidence through the analysis of the API Epic uses to decide which promotions and services Fortnite an Epic account has the right and the output of said API, it seems that you will need a fairly recent Android device if you plan to play the mobile version of Fortnite on the Google operating system. The output was updated on 2 August according to a report from XDA. Fortnite Android Minimum Requirements Here are the minimum requirements to run Fortnite Mobile on Android. OS: 64-bit Android 5.0 Lollipop or higher RAM: 3GB or higher GPU: Adreno 530 or higher, Mali-G71 MP20, Mali-G72 MP12 or higher If this is correct, it would mean that like other Unreal Engine games, it is more GPU than limited CPU. Most devices with a Qualcomm Snapdragon 820 and Samsung Exynos 8895 or higher should be able to play Fortnite Mobile. Fortnite's Android Release Delay is PUBG Mobile's GainPreviously, Epic Games CEO Tim Sweeney commented on the mobile list of Fortnite Android saying that "Fortnite will come to all Android devices that are able to perform stably and with good performance. Stay tuned for the details of the launch timing." He also confirmed that Fortnite Android would be playable through Fortnite Installer instead of Google Play. The reason is that the company does not believe in giving "open platforms" like the Google Play Store 30 percent of Fortnite revenue. " First, Epic wants to have a direct relationship with our customers on all platforms where this is possible. The great thing about the internet and the digital revolution is that this is possible, now that physical stores and middlemen distributors are no longer needed," Sweeney said in conversation with Touch Arcade. "Second, we are motivated by efficiency30% deposit fee is a high cost in a world where game developers' 70 percent must haveall the cost of developing, operating and supporting their games.
