Element tv wifi issues

It's a small cardboard box, which delivered me as he said "try these." Inside the box there were two white-wall-cube things. they had each of the L.E.D. and an ethernet jack on them. you can connect one to the 120v ocita near the router, then connect the cube and router with an ethernet cable. then do the same with the other cube near your roku, connecting the roku in the same way. This gives you a reliable ethernet connection between your roku and your router. I checked the connection strength between the two cubes using an application provided by their manufacturer, they are good for between 600 and 850 mps in my position, which is way more than I need. was the end of my connection problems with my ultra roku. it was perfect for more than a year, so I bought another couple of cubes (they are sold in pairs) when we bought our new tcl tv this Christmas. before i turn on the TV, i connected it to an ethernet cube (apparently, once the router is connected to the wiring of your house with a cube, you can have a total of 16 cubes connected on your "domestic network.") when i turned on the tcl for the first time, the internet connection was already warm and i proceeded to update the firmware both in tv and in built-in roku. This connection is on another floor in our house, so i checked again the connection speed, which was about 350 mps... still a good 20 times what i would need to transmit 4k. I know you don't want to hear that your roku tv has an unreliable wifi system, and maybe not really. maybe there is some other exhausting problem, not related to the TV Roku/WiFi, which is causing your connection problem. Heck, I still don't know what the problem was with my ultra roku, but whatever it was, it was made moot when I bypassed the whole RF connection problem with these ethernet wall cubes.If you can't solve your connection problem, I just wanted you to know there's another solution, with cast iron, cast iron, to you...[/font][color]I'm sorry for the strange string of characters in the first paragraph... I don't know what happened, but it's my first place here. Page 2 Not open for further answers. Previous Next Order by votes I have no ELEFW328X element and how can I get WiFi? Isn't that a smart TV at all? Why should you connect it to wifi? That model is not a Smart TV, it has neither WiFi nor an Ethernet port so that it cannot connect to a network, there would be no point as TV does not have any network software or Internet applications. You need to buy a Smart TV if you want to connect it to a network. You can use any media streamer (Roku, Apple TV, Firestick, Chromestick, Android TV) to add smart features to your TV. The streamer connects to wifi rather than TV. Reactions: weibo Status Unopened for further answers.
